COLD WAVE GOOD FOR FRUIT

A fruit grower stated there was no injury to the trees and the cold weather would be a benefit to them and strengthen the prospects for a good crop the coming season, especially peaches. The warm weather which had been prevailing was not so good, as it had the tendency to push the wood forward. The cold snap will check growth in that direction. The danger of bud freezing lies in the premature forcing forward of the buds.

COLORED WOMEN IN NIGHT ROW

May Edwards and Mattie Tonsil Fight for a Half Hour on Baltimore Street. Arrested and Held in Jail for Hearing.

A row Monday night on Baltimore street between two colored women of town brought out the local police force and caused numerous residents of the vicinity of Baltimore and Middle streets to rise from their slumbers to investigate the cause of the disturbance.

The fuss which finally grew into a fight not only of words but of fists and other personal weapons started shortly before eleven o'clock when May Edwards and Mattie Tonsil engaged in an altercation in front of the Court House. The argument waxed warm and loud, so loud in fact that Officer Strop heard the noise at the fire engine house. He hurried to the scene and ordered the women home. They refused to go saying that they wanted to stay there with several men who were cleaning the pavement.

About a half hour later Officers Shaler and Strop appeared on the scene and by this time one of the men had chased the Tonsil woman as far as the Wabash Hotel where he is said to have struck her over the head with a snow shovel. The two women were soon at it again and when the officers reached them they were going at each other at a lively rate, making night hideous with the racket.

A few minutes later they were in Sheriff Thompson's care and safely lodged in the jail to await a hearing before Squire Hill on Wednesday. The information against them charges that they "did in a tumultuous manner make an affray."

BIRTHDAY SURPRISE PARTY

A very enjoyable surprise party was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Currens at Greenmount on New Year's evening. Mrs. Currens' birthday. Those present were: Frank Currens, wife and son, Donald, William Fissel and wife, Charles Strassbaugh and wife, L. D. Weikert and wife, John Riley, wife and daughter, Gladys, Edw. Weikert and wife, Frank Hiert and wife, Robert Harner, Mrs. Tillie Champion, Mrs. Charles Rohrbaugh, Mrs. U. E. Weikert, George McDonnell, James McCullough, Ruth McDonnell, Misses Mary Riley, Mabel, Lillie and Nellie Harner, Ruth Herr, Gladys and Margaret Weikert, Lola McDonnell, Messrs. Harry McDonnell, Leslie Fair, John Nall, William McCullough, Frank Harner, David Riley, James Riley, Ray Herr, Cleason Fair, Donald Weikert, Ralph and Allen McDonnell, Lewis Shelleman.

REED UNDER GUARD

William Reed, in Franklin county jail under sentence of death for killing Sadie Mathame, has been removed by Sheriff Walker to the women's side of the jail and placed in an upstairs cell. A guard has been placed over him. He is allowed the freedom of the corridor during the day; at night he is locked up. There are no other prisoners in his tier. Deputy Sheriff Ellsworth Kuhn, Turnkey Walker and ex-Constable James Houser constitute his guard, taking turns in doing this duty. Heretofore Reed had been allowed to mingle with the other male prisoners and have the freedom of the corridors with them. This has been considered by Sheriff Walker not altogether safe and he has accordingly made this new disposition of the prisoner.

RURAL CARRIERS SUFFER

Of those who are suffering severely from the cold weather perhaps no class of men come in for more discomfort than the rural mail carriers starting from Gettysburg and the other post offices in the county. Twenty five mile drives every day over roads that in many places are none too good have made heavy clothing an absolute necessity and when the carriers come in from their long day's work they are usually thoroughly chilled. The rain and sleet of Monday night prevented much drifting which would otherwise have made conditions almost intolerable.

COUNTY TEACHERS TO HOLD RALLY

Instructors from Kutztown School and Harrisburg to Make Addresses. Fairfield Residents to Serve Dinner.

Adams County's public school teachers will hold their second rally for this year in Fairfield on Friday evening and Saturday at which a large percentage of the teachers of the county are expected to be present.

Superintendent Roth has secured as speakers for the sessions Prof. A. C. Rothermel, principal of the State Normal School at Kutztown, and Hon. R. S. McNeal, of the School Department at Harrisburg. There will be three sessions and the speakers will be present at all of them.

Friday evening will be devoted to two addresses and several musical numbers by local talent and the session will be principally for school patrons. The meetings Saturday morning and afternoon are specially intended for the teachers of the county and the lectures and discussions will be along practical lines. At noon on Saturday the residents of Fairfield will serve dinner to the teachers in Odd Fellows' Hall. The sessions are to be held in the public school building at Fairfield.

The first of this year's series of teachers' rallies was held during the fall at Arendtsville. The third rally will take place in McSherrystown on February 10.

HOBOS ARRESTED

Residents of Edgemont have lately been troubled with a bunch of tramps who infest that community. They are insulting and raise all kinds of trouble when denied food or clothing. On Saturday Sheriff Snively, Special Officer Burnett and Deputy Doble, Hagerstown went to Edgemont and made a raid. They succeeded in capturing two negroes, Charles Hull and Rudolph Sharer, and took them before Justice Ferguson, of Smithsburg, who sentenced the prisoners to two months in the House of Correction. The men were taken to Hagerstown and lodged in jail.

When the officers arrived at Edgemont they found the hobos had built a large house of new cross ties next to the water tank and on the inside had a large coal fire. There was also stored over a ton of coal in the building. It is thought the rest of the gang heard of the officers' coming and made their escape.

TO OPEN SEASON

The opening game of the Gettysburg College basketball season will be played Thursday evening in the college gymnasium when Mount St. Mary's will be the opponents. This is the first time the two institutions have met in basketball and the game will be looked forward to with special eagerness on account and because of the keen rivalry which has always existed between the two schools. The local college team is strong this year and can be counted upon to make a good showing. They leave on Friday for a trip of several days.

MANY REQUESTS FOR CHARITY

Cold Weather Brings Large Numbers of Requests for Aid from People who Want Fuel, Food and Clothing.

With the presence of zero weather, deep snow and howling wind, applications for the charity funds of the town which had ceased somewhat over the warm weather have been redoubled and the money in the Eichelberger Fund is being rapidly decreased. Applications are received daily by the women who have charge of the distribution of the fund and efforts are being made to distribute it so that the most good can be accomplished.

The total amount of proceeds from the fund of $3325, is $166.25 and of this amount less than $100.00 now remains though the winter has apparently just commenced. Demands now are principally for coal and wood and it is for these necessities that most of the orders are granted.

Clothing and food also come in for some appropriations and many families in the town get their relief from privation and suffering through the gift of several dollars. Cash is never given, however the system of distributing the fund providing that orders on various business houses of town be given. These stores then turn over the funds to the applicants and receive the money from the borough treasurer. In this respect it differs from the Stable Fund where cash is donated.

As at Christmas time, there are plenty of efforts to secure funds by unworthy parties. On Monday two members of the same family applied for gifts, one going to the front door and the other to the rear door of one of the members of the committee. Fortunately both were known and the scheme failed to work. Efforts are made to investigate every application so that no people may get help who do not need it.

SURPRISE PARTY

On Monday evening Mr. and Mrs. William Hull gave a surprise party at their home on East Middle street for their son, Donald R. Hull. The following were present: Donald Hammers, Lawrence Swope, Edward Stine, Donald Stine, Glen Tipton, Ralph Geiselman, Dorothy Williams, Paul Williams, Martha Bell, Mary Jane Seylar, Leachlan Krebs, William Hull, David Hull, Donald Hull, Anna Geiselman, Dorothy Trostle, Madeline Diehl, Hilda Tipton, Helen Geiselman, Edith Wright, Sara McCullough, Margaret Hull, Virginia Oyler, Gilbert Bell, Fred Nau, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Stock, Miss Maude Whiteleather, Mr. and Mrs. William Stansbury, Mrs. John Shelleman and daughter, Vergie.

SEVERE FALL

On Monday afternoon Mrs. George W. Spangler fell on the pavement at the First National Bank building, being rendered unconscious from injuries to the back of her head. She regained consciousness in a few minutes and was taken to her home where she is now resting comfortably.

There were numerous falls on Monday and today, no less than six people going down at one place on Chambersburg street while other glassy places about town all claimed their share of victims, no one being seriously injured.

SUCCESSFUL REVIVAL

The meetings still continue at Wensville, sixty three had presented themselves at the altar of prayer when the meeting closed on Saturday evening. The interest also continues. About one dozen are forward. Thirty seven have joined on probation. Forty three children and adults have been baptized in the charge this conference year. Through the assistance of Rev. L. M. Gardner it is possible to hold revival services at York Springs at the same time.

THURSDAY EVENING

Mr. Paul Gilmore, in the play of all plays, "The Mummy and the Humming Bird" which will appear at the Wizard Theatre, Thursday evening, is a production for the home, and there never was a piece before the public more successful than the above. The vehicle is one which in itself creates strong interest throughout, suggesting the possibilities, as the consequences of a feminine love neglected by its mate and craving affection from whatever source it may come. The parts are all in capable hands, including Miss Kathryn Hutchison and Mr. Paul Gilmore. This is the play that made Mr. Paul Gilmore a star. It was originally produced by Sir Charles Wyndham in London. In America it is to Mr. Paul Gilmore what it was to Wyndham in London.

THREE WARSHIPS LOST AT SEA

Torpedo Boat Destroyers Not Heard From Since Storm.

A SEARCH IS ORDERED

Boats Are Believed to Be Proceeding on Their Way to Bermuda — The Terry Is Safe.

Washington, Jan. 9.—Three vessels of the torpedo boat flotilla are still unaccounted for after the storm of Friday night. They are the torpedo boat destroyers Mayrant, Drayton and McCall.

With the torpedo boat destroyer Terry accounted for, the vessels of the second division of the fleet, under Rear Admiral Cameron Winslow, will engage in a search for the Mayrant, Drayton and McCall.

It is declared at the department that there is no reason to believe that the little craft are in distress, and it is presumed that they are continuing their voyage southward toward the West Indies.

Admiral Winslow reported to the navy department by wireless from his flagship, Louisiana, that he was in touch with the torpedo destroyer Roe, one of the flotilla to which the Terry was attached.

The weather was fine, but the Roe's wireless would not transmit more than five miles.

The Terry is safe. A wireless dispatch received at the Norfolk navy yard said the Terry was proceeding under her own steam for the Virginia Capes and would arrive in Hampton Roads shortly.

The scout cruiser Salem, which also was buffeted by the heavy seas, will reach Hampton Roads. She went in search of the Terry.

A dispatch from Hamilton, Bermuda, says that seven torpedo boat destroyers and the mother ship Dixie have reached that port. The boats are the Perkins, Walker, Ammen, Sterrett, Preston, Trippe and Paulding. The Paulding went ashore off St. George's and a tug which went to her assistance was driven ashore. Later the Paulding was refueled and proceeded under her own steam.

The safety of the mother ship Dixie and the destroyers was a source of relief to naval officials.

The storm had been one of the most severe that had prevailed off the coast for many years, and it was said to be almost a miracle that none of the little destroyers foundered. The Dixie was badly battered up by the seas. The destroyers had a more trying experience. The vessels will be put in shipshape at Bermuda, where the courtesy of the British dock yard has been extended.

The dissipation of the units of the Atlantic fleet owing to the severe storm has completely upset the plans so carefully framed by the naval war college for a search problem on a great scale involving the detection of an enemy supposed to be approaching the Atlantic coast.

It is believed that the problem will be abandoned and that the vessels of the fleet undamaged by the storm will proceed to Guantanamo for the winter drills, while the "lame ducks" will return to the northern navy yards to refit.

SHIP SUNK, CREW MISSING

Fears That Sailors of Lost Vessel
May Have Perished.

Atlantic City, N. J., Jan. 9.—The federal life saving crew from Tatham's station reported the finding of a two-masted schooner sunk in eight fathoms of water, four miles southeast by east of their station.

No signs of life or boats were found about the wreck, and it is feared the men aboard her sank with the boat or were lost in the gale. No life saving station or ship has reported picking up the crew.

It is thought the vessel went down on Thursday or Friday night and that the northwest gale which prevailed along the coast probably blew the crew, in their boats, out to sea, where they are thought to have perished in the zero weather.

Bulldog Upsets Lamp, Burns Home.

Altoona, Pa., Jan. 9.—Jumping on the table, a bull terrier upset a lighted lamp in the home of Stanley Galsky, at Allegheny Furnace, while the family was visiting a neighbor, and the house, with all its contents, including the dog, was burned. In a tin can, hidden in a bed, was $250, the savings of years, which was also consumed. Frantic efforts were made to recover it before the house was doomed, but the flames drove Galsky back.

Kills Wife and Himself.

Brownsville, Pa., Jan. 9.—During a quarrel as to which should get up first, Lewis Campbell, thirty-five years old, a miner, shot and killed his wife, Mary, and then ended his own life by firing a bullet into his head. They leave a four-months-old child, which was asleep in the same room at the time of the shooting.

Three Perish in Snowslide.

Logan, Utah, Jan. 9.—Three members of a party of four workmen who were taking out loes in Black Smith Canyon, near here, were suffocated under a snowslide.

M'MANIGAL DISGUISED FOR TRIP EAST

Shaved Off Mustache and Donned Goggles.

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 9.—Ortie McManigal, principal witness in the federal grand jury's investigation of dynamiting plots, ended his secret journey from Los Angeles.

Under a heavy guard he was brought to Indianapolis and lodged in a cell room in the government building.

McManigal came by way of Kansas City and Chicago in custody of Los Angeles officers and deputy United States marshals.

It is not known yet when McManigal will go before the federal grand jury.

To keep McManigal from being interfered with his identity was hidden during his trip. He was taken from the Los Angeles jail on New Year's day; went by train to Burbank, Cal., and was driven by automobile to San Bernardino.

There he shaved his mustache and donned goggles as a disguise. He left San Bernardino on Wednesday, traveled by way of Albuquerque, arrived in Chicago on Saturday night and was taken to a hotel, where he had a conference with W. J. Burns, the detective. The party left Chicago late on Sunday.

McManigal was allowed to see his father in private.

Bandits Retreat From Trolley Car on Threat of Battle.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Jan. 9.—Two masked men boarded a Duryea car and shoved a revolver under the nose of John Corliss, the conductor.

Corliss was ordered to turn over his valuables at once. He shivered and shook as he looked into the barrel of the pistol, and just as he was beginning to turn his pockets inside out, Thomas McLaughlin, the motorman, and two passengers appeared and informed the bandits that unless they beat a retreat the trolley car would be the scene of a battle.

This threat had its effect and the highwaymen began to show the white feather. They backed towards the end of the car, placed their weapons in their pockets and jumped from the car into the darkness for a hurried exit.

Susquehanna Closed For 20 Miles.

Lancaster, Pa., Jan. 9.—As a result of the cold wave the $12,000,000 hydro-electric plant at McCall's Ferry, on the Susquehanna river, was inoperative from Friday until Sunday night, when one turbine was gotten into commission. The slush ice cut off the water supply. Through the aid of steam pipes a channel was effected sufficient to supply water for one wheel. The Susquehanna is closed from Columbia to the big dam, a distance of about twenty miles.

BELIEVE COAL GAS KILLED FOUR

Defective Heater Filled Flanagan
Home With Fumes.

DISCARD POISON THEORY

Philadelphia Police Now Believe Family Met Death From Deadly Fumes
From Stove.

Philadelphia, Jan. 9.—Autopsies held by coroner's physicians upon the bodies of Mrs. William Flanagan and Catherine Murray, her boarder, who, with two other persons, were found dead on Sunday in the Flanagan home at 1324 North Twenty-fourth street, caused the police to discard all theories that the people in the house had been poisoned and to assert that it is now practically certain that they were killed by coal gas.

It has been found that the heater was old; that until last week there had not been a fire in it for several years; that when the fire was first lighted the house was filled with the poisonous fumes, and had to be repaired; that Saturday afternoon, when the repairs had been made, one of the young men in the house filled the furnace full of coal and left the door of the furnace open; and that because of the cold the family kept all the windows in the house shut.

William Flanagan, the husband of Mrs. Flanagan, was located in Baltimore, Md., according to a telephone message received by Captain Souder from the chief of police of that city. Flanagan was ignorant of the tragedy until told of it by the police and was deeply affected.

He explained that he had left his home on Tuesday and had gone to Baltimore in search of work. He was practically penniless when found and will be sent home.

The coroner's office is investigating other theories, and will conduct a chemical examination of various articles of food found in the house, and also of a white powder which, it is reported, is medicine, and which Mrs. Flanagan is said to have dissolved in a glass of water on Saturday evening.

Dr. Wadsworth informed the detectives that he had removed the viscera of Mrs. Flanagan and Miss Murray and sent them to City Chemist Robinson to have their contents analyzed.

He also gave permission later to undertakers to remove the bodies from the house, but directed them not to inject embalming fluid into them. It was believed at first that the dead were victims of poison taken in milk or tea which was served at the Saturday evening supper. Articles of food which were found in the house are to be submitted to chemical analysis. But after the investigation developed the facts about trouble with the heater, detectives who worked on the case announced their belief that coal gas had been the deadly agency.

Mrs. Flanagan, the detectives have found out, had her life insured for $1000. She owned several houses, including the one in which she lived. She was to have received $1000 from a building and loan association within a few days. Her daughter, Annie, and the adopted baby also had their lives insured.

MRS. ROOSEVELT ILL

Doctor Says Her Condition Was Serious, But Hopes For Quick Recovery.

Oyster Bay, L. I., Jan. 9.—Mrs. Roosevelt has been seriously ill at her home here.

Two months ago she was injured by a fall from her horse while out riding with the colonel.

In the midst of political stress Colonel Roosevelt has been playing the part of nurse at his wife's bedside for the last few days.

Dr. G. W. Fuller, one of the physicians in attendance upon Mrs. Roosevelt, said:

"It is true that Mrs. Roosevelt has been seriously ill. She had a relapse, but is better, and I hope she will be all right in a few days."

When asked if Mrs. Roosevelt's illness is the result of her accident, the physician said: "Not the result of the accident, but her present illness found her in a weakened condition."

Whisky May Cost Child's Life.

Philadelphia, Jan. 9.—Drinking a bottle of whisky at their home, John Morris, five years old, and his sister Nora, two and a half years old, of 224 Pierce street, both became violently ill and were removed to the Mt. Sinai hospital. The boy was soon pronounced out of danger and sent home, but the girl's condition is serious and the physicians fear she will die. The two children were found in a state of coma by their parents, with the empty bottle by their side. They had gotten the whisky when no one was looking.

Marion Wanamaker Seriously Ill.

Philadelphia, Jan. 9.—Marion Wanamaker, the youngest and only living brother of John Wanamaker, is in a serious condition at his home, 1803 Wallace street. Mr. Wanamaker was stricken with paralysis Saturday at Wanamaker & Brown's store, with which he is prominently identified.

OFFERS TO SETTLE

Cutlery Importers Would Give $1,000-
000 to End Case.

Philadelphia, Jan. 9.—A confession by a Philadelphia cutlery importer involving the undervaluation of German cutlery by importers of this city, New York and Boston is said to be in the hands of Secretary of the Treasury MacVeagh.

The confession is said to have been made by an importer who is alleged to have been a party to the undervaluation. The importer has been promised immunity from prosecution.

Secretary MacVeagh has been offered $1,000,000 by the importers of German cutlery in this country to effect a settlement, but it is understood the secretary demands $5,000,000, and unless this sum is paid the United States courts will shortly begin proceedings based on false consular invoices made out to the government by the cutlery importers.

KILLS MOTHER AND SELF

Young Man Goes Mad, Commits Double Crime and Fires House.

Millford, Mass., Jan. 8.—Clarence L. Racine, seventeen years old, killed his mother, Mrs. Louis Racine, with a butcher knife, set fire to the house and then stabbed himself to death.

The blaze was extinguished by firemen. The boy is believed to have been temporarily insane.

There were indications that the mother had made a fight for her life from the kitchen, where the struggle began, to the bedroom, where firemen found her body, which had been all most decapitated.

RICHESON DELAYS PLEA TO BEG FOR MERCY

Effort Being Made to Secure Life Sentence.

Boston, Jan. 9.—As Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson was about to start from his cell in the Charles street jail for the superior court to plead to willfully murdering his former sweetheart, Miss Avis Linnell, his jailors were notified that his counsel could not be present and that the accused clergyman need not appear.

The lawyer brought about the delay in the belief that he could secure a life sentence thereby. Even if Richeson pleads guilty it is expected that sentence to the electric chair will not be pronounced for a week or two.

District Attorney Pelletier was closeted with Governor Foss for half an hour. Mr. Pelletier admitted that Governor Foss spoke about the Richeson case, but emphatically denied that the governor asked him to consider a second degree plea by the pastor. The district attorney stated that it lay within his province to order Richeson's production in court, but he was willing to grant a brief postponement.

Following Pelletier's appearance at the state house, it was stated that Governor Foss would not refuse to entertain a petition for clemency.

The statement from the executive chamber relating to Richeson's case was taken to indicate that a petition was expected within a short time.

RECORD ANTHRACITE YEAR

Coal Shipments Totaled Nearly 70,
000,000 Tons.

Seranton, Pa., Jan. 9.—The shipments of anthracite coal for the year 1911 were the largest ever reported—69,954,299 tons—an increase of 5,048,513 tons as compared with 1910.

The largest shipments in any previous year were 67,109,393 or 2,844,906 tons less than in 1911.

The December shipments, although above the average, showed a slight decrease over the very large output in December, 1910. All companies except the Delaware & Hudson, reported increases. The figures were $115,427 tons, as compared with 6,231,578 tons in December, 1910, a decrease of 116,151 tons.

THE GIRL from HIS TOWN

By MARIE VAN VORST
Illustrations by M. G. KETTER

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Dan Blair, the 22-year-old son of the fifty-million-dollar copper king of Blairtown, Mont., is a guest at the English home of Lady Galorey. Dan's father had been courteous to Lord Galorey during his visit to the United States and the courtesy is now being returned to the young man. The youth has an ideal girl in his mind whom he some day hopes to find.

CHAPTER II.—Dan meets Lily, Duchess of Breakwater, a beautiful widow, who is attracted by his immense fortune and takes a liking to her.

CHAPTER III.—Back at Blairtown, when Dan was a boy, a girl with golden hair, in a white dress trimmed with blue and a solo at a church. He had never forgotten her, although she never again appeared in Blairtown.

CHAPTER IV.—The Galoreys, Lily and Dan take a box at a London theater where one Letty Lane is the star. Dan recognizes her as the girl from his town who sang so sweetly. Going behind the scenes he introduces himself to her and she remembers him.

CHAPTER V.—He learns that Prince Potomac, whom he has met in the Galorey set, is a suitor and expert to Letty. He sees them in a cafe and the singer gives him a bright smile of loyal fellowship.

CHAPTER VI.

Galorey Seeks Advice.

Blair did not go back at once to Osdene Park. He stopped over in London for a few days to see Joshua Ruggles, and so remarked for the first time the difference between the speech of the old and the new world. Mr. Ruggles spoke broadly, with complete disregard of the frills and adornments of the King's English. He spoke United States of the pure, broad, western brand, and it rang out, it vibrated and swelled and rolled, and as Ruggles didn't care who heard him, nothing of what he had to say was lost.

Old Mr. Blair had left behind him a comrade, and as far as advice could go the old man knew that his Dan would not be bankrupt. "Advice," Dan Blair senior once said to his boy, "is the kind of thing we want some fellow to give us when we ain't going to do the thing we ought to do, or are a little ashamed of something we have done. It's an awful good way to get cured of asking advice just to do what the fellow tells you to at once."

During Ruggles' stay in London the young fellow looked to it that Ruggles saw the sights, and the two did the principal features of the big town, to the rich enjoyment of the Westerner. Dan took his friend every night to the play, and on the fourth evening Ruggles said: "Let's go to the circus or a vaudeville, Dan. I have learned this show by heart!" They had been every night to see "Mandalay."

"Oh, you go on where you like, Josh," the boy answered. "I'm going to see how she looks from the pit." Ruggles was not a Blairtown man. He had come from farther west, and had never heard anything of Sarah Towney or Letty Lane. He applauded the actress vigorously at the Gaiety at first, and after the third night slept through most of the performance. When he waked up he tried to discover what attraction Letty Lane had for Dan. For the young man never left Ruggles' side, never went behind the scenes, though he seemed absorbed, as a man usually is absorbed for one reason only.

In response to a telegram from Osdene Park, Dan motored out there one afternoon, and during his absence Ruggles was surprised at his hotel by a call.

"My dear Mr. Ruggles," Lord Galorey said, for he was the page boy fetched up, "why don't you come out to see us? All friends of old Mr. Blair's are welcome at Osdene."

Ruggles thanked Galorey and said he was not a visiting man, that he only had a short time in London, and was going to Ireland to look up "his family tree."

"There are one hundred acres of trees in Osdene," laughed Galorey; "you can climb them all." And Ruggles replied:

"I guess I wouldn't find any O'Shaughnessy Ruggles at the top of any of 'em, my lord. The boy has gone out to see you all today." Galorey nodded. "That is just why I toddled in to see you!"

Ruggles' caller had been shown to the sitting room, where he and Dan hunched and smoked during the Westerner's visit. There was a pile of papers on the table, in one corner a typewriter covered by a black cloth. Galorey took a chair and, refusing a cigarette, lit his pipe.

"Blair, however," he said, "wasn't as keen on this scent as you'd expect. His intuition was wrong." Ruggles raised his eyebrows slightly. "I mean to say," Lord Galorey went on, "that he knew me in the West when I had cut loose for a few blessed months from just these things into which he has sent his boy—from what, if I had a son, God knows I'd throw him as far as I could."

"Blair wanted Dan to see the world." "Of course, that is right enough. We all have to see it, I fancy, but this boy isn't ready to look at it."

"He is twenty-two," Ruggles returned. "When I was his age I was supporting four people." Galorey went on: "Osdene Park at present isn't the window for Blair's boy to see life through, and that is what I have come up to London to talk to you about, Mr. Ruggles. I should like to have you take him away."

"What's Dan been up to down there?" "Nothing as yet, but he is in the pocket of a woman—he is in a nest of women."

Ruggles' broad face had not altered its expression of quiet expectation. "There's a lot of 'em down there," he asked.

"There are two," Galorey said briefly, "and one of them is my wife." Ruggles turned his cigarette between his great fingers. He was a slow thinker. He had none of old Blair's keenness, but he had other qualities. Galorey saw that he had not been quite understood, and he waited and then said:

"Lady Galorey is like the rest of modern wives, and I am like a lot of modern husbands. We each go our own way. My way is a worthless one, God knows I don't stand up for it, but it is not my wife's way in any sense of the word."

"Does she want Dan to go along on her road?" Ruggles asked. "And how far?"

"We are financially strapped just now," said Galorey calmly, "and she has got money from the boy." He didn't remove his pipe from his mouth; still holding it between his teeth he put his hand in his pocket, took out his wallet, drew forth four checks and laid them down before Ruggles. "It is quite a sum," Galorey noted, "sufficient to do a lot to Osdene Park in the way of needed repairs." Ruggles had never seen a smile such as curved his companion's lips.

"But Osdene Park will have to be repaired by money from some other source."

Ruggles wondered how the husband had got hold of the checks, but he didn't ask and he did not look at the papers.

"When Dan came to the Park," said Galorey, "I stopped bridge playing, but this more than takes its place!" Ruggles' big hand went slowly toward the checks; he touched them with his fingers and said: "Is Dan in love with your wife?"

And Lord Galorey laughed and said: "Lord no, my dear man, not even that! It is pure good nature on his part—mere prodigality. Edith appealed to him, that's all."

Relief crossed Ruggles' face. He understood in a flash the worldly appeal to the rich young man and he believed the story the husband told him.

"Have you spoken to the boy?" "My dear chap, I have spoken to him about nothing. I preferred to come to you."

"You said," Ruggles continued, "there were two ladies down to your place."

Galorey had refilled his pipe and held it as before in the palm of his hand. "I can look after the affairs of my wife and this shan't happen again, I promise you—not at Osdene, but I'm afraid I can't do much in the other case. The Duchess of Breakwater has been at Osdene for nearly three weeks, and Dan is in love with her." Ruggles put the four checks one on top of the other. "Is the lady a widow?" "Unfortunately, yes."

"She is aiming at ten million pounds."

"So that's the nest Dan has got into at Osdene," the Westerner said. And Galorey answered: "That is the nest."

"And he has gone out there today—got a wire this morning."

"The duchess has been in an awful funk," said Galorey, "because Dan's been stopping in London so long. She sent him a message, and as soon as Dan wired back that he was coming to the Park, I decided to come here and see you."

Ruggles ruminated: "Has the duchess complicated financially?" "Rather!" the other answered.

And Ruggles turned his broad, honest face full on Galorey: "Do you think she could be bought off?"

Galorey took his pipe out of his mouth. "It depends on how far Dan has gone on with her. To be frank with you, Mr. Ruggles, it is a case of emotion on the part of the woman. She is really in love with Dan. Gad!" exclaimed the nobleman. "I have been on the point of turning the whole brood out of doors these last days. It was like imprisoning a mountain breeze in a chancel house—a woman with her scars and her experience and that boy—I don't know where you've kept him or how you kept him as he is, but he is as clear as water. I have talked to him and I know."

Nothing in Ruggles' expression had changed until now. His eyes glowed. "Dan's all right," he said softly. "Don't you worry! He's all right. I guess his father knew what he was doing, and I'll bet the whole thing was just what he sent him over here for! Old Dan Blair wasn't worth a copper when the boy was born, and yet he had ideas about everything and he seemed to know more in that old gray head of his than a whole library of books. Dan's all right."

"My dear man," said the nobleman, "that is just where you Americans are wrong. You comfort yourself with your eternal 'Dan's all right,' and you won't see the truth. You won't breathe the word 'scandal,' and yet you are thick enough in them, God knows. You won't admit them, but they are there. Now be honest and look at the truth, will you? You are a man of common sense. Dan Blair is not all right. He is in an infernally dangerous position. The Duchess of Breakwater will marry him. It is what she has wanted to do for years, but she has not found a man rich enough, and she will marry this boy offhand."

"Well," said the Westerner slowly, "if he loves her and if he marries her—"

"Marries her!" exclaimed the nobleman. "There you are again! Do you think marriage makes it any better? Why, if she went off to the Continent with him for six weeks and then set him free, that would be preferable to marrying her. My dear man," he said, leaning over the table where Ruggles sat, "if I had a boy I would rather have him marry Letty Lane of the Gaiety. Now you know what I mean."

His face, which had hardened, relaxed with satisfaction. "I have seen that lady," he exclaimed, "and she is just what I need. She is a girl of the old school, and neither man spoke for a few seconds. Turning it all over in his slow mind, Ruggles remembered Dan's absorption in the last few days. "So there are three women in the nest," he concluded thoughtfully, and Gordon Galorey repeated:

"No, not three. What do you mean?"

"Your wife"—Ruggles held up one finger and Galorey interrupted him to murmur:

"I'll take care of Edith."

"The Duchess of Breakwater you think won't talk of money?"

"No, don't count on it. She is aiming at ten million pounds."

Ruggles was holding up his second finger.

"Well, I guess Dan has gone out to take care of her today."

Dan and Ruggles had seen "Mandalay" from a box, from the pit and from the stalls. On the table lay a book of the opera. While talking with Galorey, Ruggles had unconsciously arranged the checks on top of the libretto of "Mandalay."

"I'll take care of Miss Lane," Ruggles said at length.

His lordship echoed, "Miss Lane?" and looked up in surprise. "What Miss Lane, for God's sake."

"Miss Letty Lane at the Gaiety," Ruggles answered.

"Why, she isn't in the question, my dear man."

"You put her there just now yourself."

"Bosh!" Galorey exclaimed impatiently. "I spoke of her as being the limit, the last thing on the line."

"No," corrected the other, "you put the Duchess of Breakwater as the limit."

Galorey smiled frankly. "You are right, my dear chap," he accepted, "and I stand by it."

A page boy knocked at the door and came in holding out on a silver card for Mr. Ruggles, and at the interruption Galorey rose and invited Ruggles to go out with him that night to Osdene. "Lady Galorey will be delighted."

But Ruggles shook his head. "The boy is coming back here tonight," and Galorey laughed.

"Don't you believe it! You don't know how deep in he is. You don't know the Duchess of Breakwater. Once he is with her—"

At the same time that the page boy handed Mr. Ruggles the card of the caller, he gave him as well a small envelope, which contained box tickets for the Gaiety. Ruggles examined it.

"I have got some writing to do," he told Galorey, "and I'm going to see a show tonight, and I think I'll just stay here and watch my hole."

As soon as Galorey had left the Carlton, Mr. Ruggles despatched his letters and his visitor, made a very careful toilet, and after waiting until past eight o'clock for Dan to return to dinner, dined alone on roast beef and a tart, and with perfect digestion, if somewhat thoughtful mind, left the hotel and walked down the dim street to the brilliant Strand, and on foot to the Gaiety.

"Is the lady a widow?" "Unfortunately, yes."

BRYAN AGAIN MEETS DEFEAT

Colonel Guffey Keeps Seat After Lively Fight.

ACCUSED OF DISLOYALTY

Nebraskan, Opposing Oil Magnate, Threatens to 'Appeal to the People,' Which Revives Third Party Talk.

Washington, Jan. 9.—The lie was passed in the Democratic national committee, and William Jennings Bryan made a threat to "appeal to the people" if overriden by the committee in his fight to unseat Colonel James M. Guffey, the national committeeman from Pennsylvania.

This threat, coming immediately after the Bryan-LaFollette conference of Sunday, renewed gossip as to the possibility of a third party.

Despite Bryan's protest and threat the national committee voted in favor of Guffey, 39 to 18. E. Lee Montcastle was retained as a member of the committee from Tennessee, only one vote being cast in favor of Mr. Vetter, the contestant.

Colonel Guffey hurled the charge of "liar" at Congressman A. Mitchell Palmer, who is contesting his seat. The latter replied that he had spoken the truth and that only Guffey's age prevented him from making a personal matter of the affair.

Mr. Palmer had freely charged in his speech to the committee that Colonel Guffey had affiliated with Senator Penrose, the Republican leader of Pennsylvania, and that he had been disloyal to his party.

Mr. Bryan took up the argument in Mr. Palmer's behalf. He declared that he had thrice been the candidate of his party for the presidency, and that many millions of people had expressed their confidence in him. If the national committee declined to listen to him he would appeal to the people.

During the course of his argument against Colonel Guffey, Mr. Bryan severely arraigned the Philadelphia Democrats, popularly known as the Ryan-Donnelly faction of the party. Mr. Bryan declared that for years past this faction has had a working agreement with the Republican organization and that its sole reason for the present contest was for political prestige in the event of the Democratic victory at the November election. The fact that the November election wasn't taken in the Pennsylvania contest will be much all over the country.

It is well known in Washington that his closest friends had advised him to keep out of the Pennsylvania and the Tennessee contests, and his failure to convince the committee by his way of thinking in either will unquestionably damage his prestige as a leader. The supporters of Bryan, however, say he was morally and politically right in both contests and therefore that before the public tribunal he will gain rather than lose political preference.

There seems little question, however, in Washington that Bryan will favor Woodrow Wilson for president. The manner of his answer rather than his words settled his position in the minds of the half hundred correspondents who surrounded him. It was this: "Those who want to be interested in the latter seem interested. Those who attach little importance to it, however, probably dismissed it from their minds."

This vague explanation is taken in Washington to mean that he does not propose to berate or take side against all his critics of years ago and that Woodrow Wilson's criticism of him at some distant date is a thing that can be forgotten and forgiven.

The private secretary to Senator "Burrhead," one of the Republican leaders, was at the hotel where the committee met and talked with several of the members.

BRYAN IS NOT A CANDIDATE

Won't Permit His Name on Ballot Whether Roosevelt Does or Not.

Washington, Jan. 9.—"Well, a man who has actually been president hasn't the same power as a man who has not. Colonel Roosevelt may not be able to prevent his name going on the ballot, but I can and will prevent mine from going on."

This was William J. Bryan's comment when told that former President Roosevelt had been quoted as saying that he was powerless to keep his name off the ballot in the presidential preferential primary.

Mr. Bryan said he would not be a candidate for the presidency under any circumstances.

New Mexico Congressmen Take Oath. Washington, Jan. 9.—New Mexico's first members of congress, George Curry, Republican, and H. B. Ferguson, Democrat, were sworn in as members of the house amid applause. They were presented by Mr. Sulzer, of New York.

WOMEN BEATEN TO DEATH BY FIVE MEN

Wealthy Planter Also Victim of Night Attack.

Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 9.—Mrs. Kate Carpenter and her mother, Mrs. Davis, were killed, and M. P. Carpenter, a wealthy planter, probably fatally injured by a band of five white men.

The gang beat the women to death and left the man for dead at the Carpenter home, near Blytheville, Ark.

There was a knock at the front door of the Carpenter home shortly before midnight. Carpenter answered it, and as he opened the door he was knocked down.

The two women, it appeared, made a desperate resistance before being clubbed to death. Furniture was demolished, window hangings torn into shreds and glass and brick-brace was smashed as if a desperate hand-to-hand encounter had preceded the deaths of the two women.

Neighbors changed to visit the planter's house. Physicians revived Carpenter long enough for him to pass out details of the attack.

A posse is searching for the assassins, descriptions of whom were given by Carpenter.

Reports from Blytheville say the attack was due to the enmity borne Carpenter by certain small farmers in the neighborhood.

Useful.

A breezy western lumber salesman stopped at the Walton for a few days, returning from a trip abroad. In the course of his second evening he had made friends with half a dozen men from other cities.

"Yes, boys," he said, insisting that they take wine, "I can well afford to pay for the bubbles. Why, when I was in Europe I pulled off a little deal that'll net me more than the cost of a thousand trips over the pond."

"You see, I trade principally in white woods free from knots. Of course, pine knots are waste, only good for firewood. But I just made a deal with a Swiss toy factory, and I'll send all the knots and knot holes I—"

"What do they use 'em for?" asked the inquisitive one.

"For holes for wooden horses," came back the answer.—Philadelphia Times.

SOME FACTORS IN BEEF PRODUCTION.

So many things have to do with profit in the production of beef that the problem becomes complex. Probably the most important one is the matter of age. It is a pretty well recognized principle that the young animal puts on gain at smaller expense than the older one, consequently measuring by this principle alone the young animals should always be placed in the feed lot. There are other influences, however. The condition of the animal when it goes into the feed lot is important. Then, too, the demands of the market must not be overlooked. Some beef markets require animals of moderate finish. As a rule, however, the fatter the animals within certain limits the higher the price paid by the buyer; consequently the older and more mature animals are apt to reach the desired state of fatness sooner than will a very young animal.

As the fattening period progresses the cost of putting on flesh becomes greater and greater; consequently the animal that will go into the feed lot and fatten with the greatest rapidity is the one that is the most profitable. Then very thin animals usually sell for the least as feeders. This makes the margin between the buying and selling price wider, and therefore it might frequently pay to buy very thin animals, provided they had good quality and the feeder knew how to make them gain rapidly. The price of feed, of course, has a great deal to do with this proposition.

It is one grand mistake to try to get steers on what is known as full feed too soon, writes W. S. A. Smith in Farm and Fireside. Personally I never get my steers on what is known as full feed—that is to say, they never in any twenty-four hours get all they can eat. When does a steer make his gain? When he is lying down. It is impossible to get economical gains if conditions are such that cattle have no comfortable place to rest. The Hereford breed of beef cattle has long been a favorite with many feeders. The fine Hereford cow shown is a good type of this easily fattened breed.

Then, too, hogs which follow the cattle must not be forgotten. Feeding shelled corn is always attended with some waste. On most farms the corn is either fed in the broken ear condition or shelled. As a result hogs must always have a part in the cattle feeding proposition. The amount of corn that will pass through the animal undigested will depend somewhat upon the condition of the cattle. If the cattle are in prime condition they will digest larger quantities than if they are not doing very well. The universal practice is to have hogs follow the cattle, and the amount of pork produced in this way is a very considerable item in reckoning profits. Of course this varies widely. It varies because of the kind of corn used, because of the season and the number of hogs that follow. If cattle are being fed very heavily the amount of pork produced will be large. During the early part of the feeding period, when only so much grain as is consumed promptly is used, the waste will be slight. It will not do, however, to leave hogs out of the reckoning.

Fattening Ration For Hogs.
John C. Burns, professor of animal husbandry of the A. and M. college of Texas, says that with tankage to supplement a grain ration cottonseed meal or wheat bran is not really needed in the fattening of hogs. He believes, however, that it would prove profitable to add a limited quantity of molasses to the ration both as an appetizer and to cheapen the feed, as molasses at 15 cents a gallon is cheaper than grain at prevailing prices. He recommends the following proportions: Nine pounds of ear corn or seven pounds of shelled corn, two pounds of black strap molasses and one pound of tankage. The grain should be soaked in water about twelve hours, and the molasses should be diluted with about its own volume of water and the tankage thoroughly stirred in it and poured over the grain in the trough at the time of feeding.

THE VALUABLE CORN.
The farmer makes the most money who devotes his fields to the growing of crops to feed stock, making use of all the raw products at home, thereby not only saving much of the cost of transportation, but also maintaining the fertility of the soil. Taking everything into consideration, corn will probably produce more food per acre for domestic animals than any other plant, and there are but few feeds which can be fed in a greater variety of ways.

It will be a very natural mistake for the farmer in the northern part of the corn belt to make this year to select larger ears of corn for seed than will mature in an average season. The past season was one of unusual length between frosts, there being 165 days instead of 120 days, as is often the case. This made possible the ripening of huge, deep-kernelled ears, seed from which it would be decidedly unsafe to use next year for any considerable portion of the field crop.

DR. GRANDMA'S O. K.

My grandma is a doctor. You bet she is O. K. I don't care what those other quacks From college have to say.

Her garret is a drug store. It smells just awful sweet With herbs a-hangin' all around In bunches done up neat.

There's pennyroyal and boneseed To take when you catch cold. And sage to put upon your head When your hair doesn't hold.

There's wintergreen for backache And horehound for a sneeze. There's sassafras to cure the boils When you can't sit with ease.

There's peppermint and catnip To take for stomach ache. They're awful good to fix you up When you eat too much cake.

I don't remember all the herbs That hang upon the wall. I know they cannot kill me, For I have tried them all.

The funny thing about it— There is no doctor bill. I just get cured for nothin' Whenever I am ill.

Indeed, my grandma doctor Just hugs me awful close And pays a kiss and nickel For takin' every dose.

C. M. BARNITZ.

GREEN FOOD A NECESSITY.

One reason why some have hens that lay few winter eggs and are often afflicted with indigestion is because the ration is all concentrated grain and meat.

Cut open Biddy's crop in summer after a day's forage in the field and you'll find it not only contains grain, seeds, bugs, worms, gravel and water, but a big proportion of vegetable food, and this not only contains elements necessary for making meat and eggs, but mixed with the other feed it makes all spongy and digestible.

Greens add relish and variety to the ration, cheapen it, increase eggs and are necessary for hen health.

The West Virginia experiment station proved this by penning two flocks of Lechorns, feeding one all grain and meat, the other the same plus greens.

The hens fed greens cost less for feed, laid 25 per cent more eggs and were in better condition at end of test. Cabbage, sprouted oats, mangels, turnips, pumpkins and potatoes are easily secured and fed once a day help to make the flock pay.

FEATHERS AND EGGSHELLS.

Brooders and colony houses with removable roofs are very convenient for cleaning. Dampness may thus be dried out by the hot sun, and on sultry nights the roof may be removed or raised to let in fresh air.

When fowls show signs of disease first look at their tufts and necks for lice or in the henhouse for mites. When they are worried by these crawl-ers they sometimes show symptoms of several diseases at the same time.

It is stated that $2,210,000 is lost by Indiana farmers on bad eggs that are counted out of their shipments and charged to them by commission men. This loss is charged to improper gathering, storing, handling and packing of eggs.

Instead of sitting in the shade and counting future profits after the strenuous hatching and brooding season is over, the practical poultryman starts a cleaning campaign and perfects plans for hen comfort for the trying winter season.

When the farmer saves up the eggs awhile, and the huckster keeps them awhile, and the country storekeeper holds them awhile, and the wholesaler stores them awhile, and the city storekeeper has them awhile, it's no wonder those eggs smell a mile, is it?

When the skin gets scurfy and the feathers drop off it's a case of favus, and a place for fowls to catch this is at many fall shows. The molting season is then on, and the absence of plumage is ascribed to molt. A dip of tobacco water stops this nasty parasitical trouble quick.

One of the amusing things you read in the poultry journal editorial describing the farmer as a farm fossil and urging him to throw off his barnacles and do something for the poultry industry. The poultry crop of this country is $1,000,000,000, and the farmer produces 95 per cent of it. Nuf sed!

In the twelve months' laying contest that terminated March 31, 1910, at Gattin, Queensland, Australia, six S. C. White Leghorns laid 1,531 eggs or 255 each per year. Leghorns from the same flock were shipped to England, 12,000 miles away, and are now showing Johnny Bull how real Leghorns lay.

Skunks have little fear of man and will trot along the road beside him like a dog or refuse to turn out for his team. They have the grit to come right into towns and cities for fowls. Bait that trap with an egg, and, if a box trap, chloroform him if caught in preference to wringing his neck with your bare hands.

When you are about to buy a pen of Barred Rocks or Wyandottes at the show before closing the sale ask if they have been produced by double mating. If so, don't buy them. The males and females by that system are produced by separate matings to get certain color and shape and when mated cannot produce their like.

Double mating for exhibition birds is a detriment to any variety and especially those whose color, shape and size fit them for the dual purpose of meat and eggs. This unnatural method has lost popularity to the Barred Rocks, Brahmas, Brown Leghorns and Silver and Golden Laced varieties and when applied to White Wyandottes surely is a brainstorm business.

W. M. Barnitz.

A fellow has a good prospect of grief and disappointment ahead when he swaps the old farm, whose productive capacity he is sure of, for a stock of merchandise, a hotel or livery barn of decidedly uncertain value and of the conduct of which he knows little or nothing. We have known of just such cases as this where-in the windup the victims didn't own anything except their clothes and with so little credit left that they could scarce get trusted for a week's board.

DIDN'T MISS A DAY

Professor D. B. Baker, who for twenty years has been the teacher of the Dillsburg primary schools, holds the remarkable record of not having missed a day during this time. The school board has granted him a week as a vacation so that he might fill his appointments with the state agriculture department to lecture at farmers' institutes.

YOUR GRAY HAIRS QUICKLY VANISH

By Using a Harmless Remedy Made From Garden Sage.

A feeling of sadness accompanies the discovery of the first gray hairs, which, unfortunately, are looked upon as heralds of advancing age. Gray hairs, however, are not always an indication of advancing age, for many people have gray hairs quite early in life. Of course, it is unnatural, and indicates that there is something wrong with the individual, and that Nature needs assistance in correcting the trouble. The same is true of hair that is constantly falling out and becoming thinner every day. If everything is right with Nature, the hair, even in comparatively elderly people, should be long, thick and glossy, without even a streak of gray.

The ideal assistant to Nature in restoring and preserving the hair is Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, a clean and wholesome dressing for daily use. It not only removes dandruff, but strengthens weak, thin and falling hair and promotes its growth. A few applications will restore faded or gray hair to its natural color.

Get a bottle to-day, and let it do for you what it has done for thousands of others.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists. People's Drug Store special agent for Gettysburg, Pa.
